tackling one of the most confusing and controversial issues in the field of international criminal law i e the genocidal intent element this monograph seeks to develop an account of genocidal intent from a collectivist perspective drawing upon the two layered structure of the crime of genocide composed of the conduct level and context level it detects the genocidal intent element at the context level the genocidal intent found in this manner belongs to a collective which significantly departs from the prior individualistic understandings of the notion of genocidal intent the author argues that the crime of genocide is not a crime of mens rea collective genocidal intent at the context level operates in a way that renders the crime of genocide itself a criminal enterprise the idea of genocide as a criminal enterprise also suggests that genocide is a leadership crime in respect of which only the high level actors can be labeled as principals as opposed to accessories the book criticizes the dominant individualistic approaches to genocidal intent in particular the knowledge based approach which have thus far governed the relevant jurisprudential and academic analysis it further demonstrates that the hidden notion of collective genocide silently governs the relevant international jurisprudence practitioners and academics in the field of international criminal law and related disciplines will find in this book a new approach to the crime of genocide the text is the first ever book length exposition of a collective account of genocidal intent its accessibility is highly enhanced by relevant footnotes sangkul kim is lecturer at korea university in seoul and research fellow with the centre for international law research and policy cilrap he served as associate legal adviser at the office of the prosecutor of the international criminal court 2004 2008 he earned law degrees from korea university and georgetown university law center this monograph addresses a contested but under discussed question in the field of criminal sentencing should an offender s remorse affect the sentence he or she receives answering this question involves tackling a series of others is it possible to justify mitigation for remorse within a retributive sentencing framework precisely how should remorse enter into the sentencing equation how should the mitigating weight of remorse interact with other aggravating and mitigating factors are there some offence or offender characteristics that preclude remorse based mitigation remorse is recognised as a legitimate mitigating factor in many sentencing regimes around the world with powerful effects on sentence severity although there has been some discussion of whether this practice can be justified within the literature on sentencing and penal theory this monograph provides the first comprehensive and in depth study of possible theoretical justifications whilst the emphasis here is on theoretical justification the monograph also offers analysis of how normative conclusions would play out in the broader context of sentencing decisions and the guidance intended to structure them the conclusions reached have relevance for sentencing systems around the world the heightened attention to research on theory of mind is due in large part to the shared intuition that this core aspect of development must have important consequences for and connections with children s evolving social competence this seems particularly true for the moral domain where a psychological or inward focus is often taken to be a constitutive feature of what distinguishes moral actions from other kinds of behavior unfortunately the theory of mind enterprise has largely failed to capitalize on this fundamental connection between mental life and morality and as a result it has been effectively cut off from the study of sociomoral development contributors to this volume illustrate different though complementary attempts to bridge the gap that exists between these research traditions two central questions are addressed first what is the impact of children s conceptions of the mind on their moral judgments second does children s mental state understanding influence the moral quality of their own behavior in the concluding chapters prominent scholars from both the theory of mind literature and the moral development domain comment on the efforts being made to link these research traditions and offer suggestions for future inquiry this is the 103rd volume of the jossey bass quarterly report series new directions for child and adolescent development
